

The world loves its explorers.

Marco Polo and Ibn Batuta. Amelia Earhart and Steve Fossett. Albert Einstein and Marie Curie.

Whether searching for new lands, new understandings or new accomplishments, when explorers venture in new directions, they take our hopes with them. When they make discoveries, we learn with them.

This issue of Perspective celebrates explorers, including:

- Meriwether Lewis, William Clark and Sacajawea, whose forays 200 years ago into what is now the American West have captured the interest of Eastern's faculty, students and alumni since the school's early days.
- Brian Bogue ('79), an alumnus who is using computer technology to teach children how to read and write music.
- The late David Terwische, an Electronic Media & Film professor who used his experiences in the entertainment industry to inspire and prepare students for careers in today's media.
- Linda Boggs ('84, '88), an alumna whose revisions to her school's curricula have helped her students improve their test scores and earned her national recognition.

But even as we recognize these people and their efforts, we recognize that in a sense each one of us is an explorer, every day facing what can be life-altering choices. Do we remain in the same routines, maintain the same attitudes? Or do we take a chance by exploring new directions, even one as

Correction:

In the last issue of Perspective, the photograph of Brig. Gen. Gratton O'Neal Sealock II on page 29, was accidentally reversed, or "flopped," causing a mirror image of the actual photograph. We apologize for this inadvertent error.
